How Uncle Hen Got His 'Nickname'

Up North everyone has two names; the one they are born with and their nickname. Uncle Hen was born Henare.

The following explains how he got his nickname.

Most people Up North like Wild Chicken Pie and Toheroa Soup. Free-range chickens are very common Up North. There are often arguments over who owns fat, wild chickens.

Henare became an expert Chicken Whisperer and would often be called in to adjudicate when there was a dispute. He would ask the chicken where it was born. Many lost chickens turned out to belong to Uncle Hen's friends and relations.

Most Sundays Henare would be invited over for wild chicken pie. Uncle Hen has now retired from being a Wild Chicken Whisperer to become a Toheroa Whisperer. (Please Don't Tell Uncle Hen I told you this!)
